By the Numbers, Decant!

A civilian waiter who allegedly failed to refill a master sergeant's wine glass and sprinkled crepes with white sugar instead of brown was relieved of his job by the sergeant, according to charges made public today by the Hawaii local of the Service Employees International Union.

Another waiter serving the same sergeant at the military's Hale Koa Hotel in Waikiki allegedly was relieved for not putting out the fire under the crepes quickly enough.

Both waiters were returned to their jobs the same night but have not yet been provided with a union shop steward, the union alleges.

The union also says the same sergeant, who reportedly was the dining room manager, had military policemen come to the hotel to remove another waiter who told the sergeant he was waiting to see his union steward.

The Service Employees Union represents about 600 employees of the hotel. It filed unfair labor practice charges with the Los Angeles office of the new Federal Labor Relations Authority.
